Welcome to another weekend of staying indoors in Chicago. With Illinois' stay-at-home order in effect through April 30, it's time to get used to what looks like the new normal for a while. Yet while you've been busy stocking the pantry and furiously wiping down door handles, Chicago creatives have been busy doing what they do best: providing you with endless options for entertainment.

To help get you through another weekend of social distancing, we offer up some of the finest virtual events to attend this weekend in Chicago -- from virtual dance parties and yoga livestreams to online theatre and animal livestreams. For IRL experiences, you can also sing Bill Withers from your window or grab free food for takeout/delivery on Easter Sunday. So support your local businesses while staying inside this weekend, and get by with a little help from some friends below.

Get free food during the Easter and Passover holidays

Now through Sunday

Cobblestone Bistro & Cider House

Recently opened North Center restaurant Cobblestone Bistro & Cider House is launching its new delivery and carryout service with free -- yes, free -- Easter and Passover meals for all this weekend. The restaurant will also be making free deliveries to the ICU ward at UIC Hospital as well as local police and fire stations.

Cost: Meals for singles are free up to $25, meals for couples are free up to $40, and meals for families are free up to $50.
